Taking a road trip with the girls? It does not have to be all about using electronics to keep them busy from the driver's seat. Try these.

Noah's Ark

Work your way through the alphabet naming animals from A-Z (Aardvark -Zither).

You can alternate letters or everyone takes a turn with each letter.

Fooler, Fooler

State three facts about yourself. The trick is that one of the facts, are not fact at all. The challenge is who can discriminate fact from fiction. Take turns being the "fooler". The player who stumps everyone, is the winner!

Would You Rather

First select a category...Food for instance. Then each other questions phrased like this: "Would you rather eat bugs or French fries?

French Fries or ice cream?

Ice Cream with whipped cream or nuts...and so on.

Topics can be serious or silly.

Junior Opera

For a designated period of time, tell your kids that when they want to say something, they have to sing it instead.

Build a Story

"Once upon a time there lived . . .

Finish the sentence...

Then the rest of the passengers continue the story one or two sentences at a time.

The Category Game

The first player names a category i.e.. first names, last names, animals, countries, friends, feelings, foods, hot or cold things.

Then take turns naming things that belong in that category. A player is out if they name something that does not belong in the category or if they can't think of another item. The game is over when only one person remains.

Then start over with a new category.

Three Nouns

State three nouns. Everyone takes turns creating a sentence with those three nouns. Alternate who is the noun giver and the sentence makers. An example from my son: Apple, mailbox, cow

"The cow was excited because her apple red bonnet arrived in the mail box today."

I'm Going on a Trip (or "Grandmother's Suitcase")

The first player says, "I'm going on a trip and I'm going to pack. . . ," finishing the sentence with the name of something that begins with the letter A. The second player repeats what the first player has said and adds the name of another item starting with B. The third player repeats everything that has been said so far and adds something that begins with C. And so on throughout the alphabet. Anyone who skips or misremembers an item is out.
